WORSHIP

Mae Yanang Shrine

Mae Yanang Shrine or Samtienhewgung Shrine was built in 1853 by a man named Limboonsoon. Yanang, also known as "Ma Jo Po", is a goddess who protects her devotees during sails and hence the people of Phuket Island flock in large numbers to worship her at the shrine daily. The deity is seen seated with a pink face and wears traditional costumes of the nobility class, both hands holding 'Jao Pang'. Her image was done probably as envisaged by the artisan and the pink color on her face symbolizes good fortune and fruitfulness. But most likely, the image was also inspired by the casting of traditional Thai Buddha statues and legends told about her from generation to generation. Besides praying for their safety at sea, the locals also pray for prosperity and success of other endeavors.

The shrine opens daily from 06.00 a.m. to 06.00 p.m.

WORSHIP

Jor Ong Shrine

Also known as 'Tai Guan Tong', this shrine was built for Tong Ee Jun Ong or Jor Ong, a Hokkien Chinese officer who served the Chinese government during the Tang Dynasty. It was originally built with wood pillars and thatch roof but descendants of the Ong family had it renovated in 1953 and again in 1970 into a 3-shophouse building with wooden interior and intricate carvings. The central hall houses the statue of Jor Ong with angels on his left and right sides where people come to worship. A huge number of people flock to the shrine for the annual feast on the 12th night of February when the shrine is colorfully decorated and filled with lively pomp and fanfares.

The shrine opens from Monday to Saturday between 07.00 a.m. to 04.00 p.m.

Phang-nga

Road

Phang Nga is another old road on Phuket Island running parallel to Thalang Road. Therefore, don't be surprised if people claim that the front of their house is on Thalang Road and the back is facing Phang Nga Road. This is because old Phuket houses were influenced by architecture in neighboring port towns which were under Dutch rule. The Dutch used to calculate tax based on the width of the property so they often built with narrow front parts but their lengths are quite long and can stretch between two roads.

Additionally, Phang Nga Road is very artistic and is home to a number of art galleries showcasing works of both local and international artists.

Jui Tui Shrine

This shrine was originally located in Rommanee Alley but after the fire, the people invited the “Hiao Hoie” (Holy Fire) in the shrine to move to Pudjoh Shrine. During the Vegetarian Festival season, they again invited the Hiao Hoie to a temporary shrine built at Suanplu Alley next to Phudjoh Shrine. Later, the owner of the alley donated the land to the “Giew Hong Tai Tay” (The Nine Emperor Gods) and built Jui Tui Shrine as a thatch-roofed abode. It was later refurbished several more times as the number of people joining the vegetarian festival grew each year.

The shrine is open daily from 06.30 a.m. to 08.00 p.m.

Pud Jor Shrine

The shrine is open daily from 06.30 a.m. to 08.00 p.m.

If you are in Phuket, it is a must that you visit this shrine which houses the highly revered Guan-Yin Pud Jor Goddess and several other gods. The lives of many Phuket locals revolve around this shrine from a young age until they grow old as they would always come here to seek medical advice through fortune-telling or even pray for a good spouse.

Road

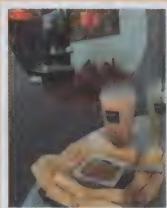

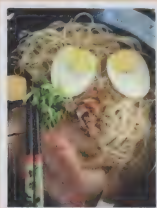

This is one of the three roads on Phuket Island to be named by King Rama 6 whom at that time was still the crown prince. He has visited Phuket twice during his lifetime as it was quite a challenge to travel long distances back then. This road is over a hundred years old, so let's take a look at some of the interesting things happening here.

Kopi de Phuket

This cafe serves aromatic fresh coffee and local Phuket food. When here, it is recommended that you try Yangzi Jiang Fish Steak, Genghis Khan Pork Patties and Three Gods Bundled Rice. They also serve delicious soft bread with Gaya custard and local snacks loved by locals and overseas visitors.

Thep Krasattri Road

This important road, which stretches a length of 43 kilometers, has been with Phuket for over a hundred years and recently celebrated its centennial anniversary in 2009. Its name was given by King Mongkut (King Rama 6) while he was still the crown prince in honor of Siam's brave heroine, "Thepkassatri". All the older buildings on other roads were all built during the reign of Kings Rama 5 and 6 but this road has buildings that were constructed during the reign of King Rama 7, which is quite rare for Phuket.

Hongyok House

This residence was built in 1930 by Luang Anupas Phuketkarn (Mr. Jin-nguan Hongyok), founder of Anupas and Sons Co., Ltd. It was designed by Khun Pisan Saragam and took three years to complete. The reason it is called "Angmoh Lao" or Western Building is because it showcases a European style with a touch of Chinese influence that was quite different from the general designs in those days. Mrs. Boosri Hongyok who married the eldest son of Luang Anupas Phuketkarn, the late Mr. Virat Hongyok, eventually inherited the house. She still continues the wishes of her late father-in-law to keep this house as the meeting place for descendants of the Hongyok family. So every year during Shengmeng (Annual Ancestor Worshipping Ceremony), family members who moved away would all gather here. Important guests are also welcome to stay. Moreover, this house is used for Tea Ceremonies as part of the Chinese-Southern wedding custom and later sending couples off to their honeymoon suite, a tradition to be kept for later generations to come. Today, Hongyok House still maintains its original style the way it was first built which is the reason it still attracts visitors and is often used as the location for movies and magazine photo shoots.
